

THE WILMINGTON JOURNAL.

WILMINGTON, N. C., MONDAY, NOV. 22, 1852.

Authorized Agents for the Journal.
JAMES M. REDMOND, Tarboro', Edgecombe county, N.C.
JOSEPH R. KEMP, Bladen county.
JAMES H. MEREDITH, Gravelly Hill, Bladen co.
B. BARNES, Black Creek, Wayne county.
LEWIS JONES, Pink Hill, P. O., Lenoir county.

BY TELEGRAPH—FOR THE JOURNAL.

Baltimore, Nov. 19th, 1852.
The Steamship Asia arrived at New York to-day, having left Liverpool on the 6th inst. Cotton was dull, but prices unchanged. Sales for the three previous days reached 22,000 bales. Flour, wheat and corn firm with a slight improvement in prices. Rosin—common, 4 shillings—and a large business doing at advanced prices; sales of 3,500 bbls. fine at 11s. 6d. per cwt. SPIRITS TURPENTINE 50 to 52s. per cwt.

Baltimore, Nov. 19th—P. M.
In New York to-day, sales of crude TURPENTINE have reached 1,200 barrels, at $4 12 to $4 25 per 280 lbs. Sales of 800 barrels SPIRITS TURPENTINE at 58 a 60 cents per gallon; sales of 1,200 barrels Common Rosin at $1 50 to $1 65 per 280 lbs.

Town Meeting.
Pursuant to notice a meeting was held at the Court House, last night, for the purpose of taking into consideration the expediency and propriety of a subscription by the town to the stock of the Cheraw and Darlington Railroad Company.

Wm. C. Howard, Esq., Magistrate of Police, was called to the chair, and T. Burr, Jr., Esq., appointed Secretary.

Col. John McRae addressed the meeting in explanation of the object sought to be attained by a subscription to the stock of the Road in question, namely: such an interest as would give us some control of the road, and at least place us on a fair footing in competing for the trade passing over it.

L. J. Fleming, Esq., Engineer of the road, was called upon to give his views. He stated the value of the trade that must pass over the road—the competition for it by Charleston, through the projected North Eastern Railroad, and the means by which it might, in his opinion, be secured to this place.

Henry Nutt, Esq., spoke warmly in favor of the town's lending her credit to the project, expressing his belief that no loss and but little risk would be incurred by her so doing, while positive advantages would arise from it.

A resolution on the subject was introduced by Col. McRae, and opposed by O. G. Parsley, Esq., who spoke at some length. After some discussion, the adjourned meeting to be held at the same place on next Tuesday evening, at 7 o'clock, and the meeting adjourned.—Daily Journal, 20th inst.

Resignation of Judge Ruffin.
The legal profession will notice with regret the resignation of Chief Justice Ruffin, of the Supreme Court of this State, to the Legislature, tendering his resignation of the seat he now holds on the Bench of that Court.

Of the high qualifications and legal standing of Judge Ruffin, it is unnecessary to speak. For years he has been acknowledged as occupying a place in the very front rank of American Jurists, exceeded by none in deep research and careful erudition, equalled by few in correctness of judgment and sound legal acumen. His place at the head of our judiciary will be hard to fill.

Of course, the choice of a Judge to fill the vacant seat will devolve upon the present General Assembly. Who will be chosen it is impossible to say, and foolish to speculate.

The Recent Slave Case in New York.

A man named LEMOS, residing in Virginia, intending moving to Texas, and to this end, shipped himself and wife, and some eight negroes, on board the "City of Richmond" steamer, bound for New York, with the view of taking water thence to New Orleans, having no wish to bring his slaves into the State of New York, or in any way place them under the jurisdiction of its laws, but simply to transfer them from one vessel to another, on their way from one slave State to another.

Presently the Abolitionists heard of it, and a writ of habeas corpus was sued out in the name of a free negro, calling himself Louis Napoleon, and the slaves brought up before Judge PAYNE, of the Superior Court, who discharged them; their master—Mr. LEMOS—thus losing his property, which, it seems, was about all he possessed.

The Judge put his decision upon the ground, that the Statutes of New York expressly forbid any slave to be brought into the State, and declare any slave brought to be free—the transit laws having been abolished in 1841, and that, therefore, he had no discretion in the matter. It was argued on behalf of the counsel for the owners, that under the laws of nations, to say nothing of the comity existing between confederated States, a citizen of a friendly State has a right to a free transit with his property, through another friendly State. The Judge held that this principle did not apply to slaves, which are not property by the laws of nations, but only by the force of local municipal law.

However this decision may be in accordance with the Statutes of New York, it cannot fail to irritate the Southern people. The trade of New York has been built up by the commerce of the slave-holding States, and when a citizen of one of those States attempts to make use of the shipping facilities of New York for the transportation of his property from one slave State to another, he is rudely and un hospitably deprived of his property. If this be the spirit of New York jurisprudence and legislation, we would not give much for her professions of liberality or justice.

The Goldborough New Era.

We would very much like to see the Agricultural papers of our State receive a liberal encouragement, and we know of none more worthy of such encouragement than our Goldborough contemporary, the New Era. It is a well edited, well printed, and instructive sheet, containing capital articles, original and selected, adapted to the latitude of North Carolina, and of direct and practical benefit to farmers. The Editor, Mr. Robinson, is one of the best writers in the State and understands the subject of which he treats.

Among our faults, my petty jealousy of our brethren of the press cannot be reckoned, and even if it were otherwise, our respective spheres of usefulness are so different that we can safely praise the Era, and urge upon the news and political press of the State, generally, to give it that favorable notice and assistance which it merits. We hope they will pass it around.

Important from Havana.

New York, Nov. 17.—The steamer Black Warrior has arrived. She left Havana on the 11th, and reports that a Spanish war steamer was cruising off the Moro, with instructions to prevent the Crescent City entering the port at every hazard.

Boston, Nov. 18.—Advices from Rio de Janeiro confirm the report of a revolution at Buenos Ayres. It occurred while Urquiza was attending a Congress

Our Book Table.
Messrs. DEWITT & DAYTON, Tribune Buildings, New York, have sent us Capt. Kyd, the Wizard of the Sea, by Professor INGRAHAM. Like the other works by the same author, it is, no doubt, readable and highly colored. The character and adventures of Kyd, have proved a greater source of wealth to the writers of tales, romances, and such like, than ever his buried treasures have to the ardent seekers thereof—since none of these latter, we believe, have ever been discovered.

The London Quarterly of October, is on our table. It is the most highly Tory of the English Reviews, and is up to the average standard of talent in these publications, which is a high one, although none of the Reviews strike us as being equal to what they used to be. JEFFREYS, SYDNEY SMITH, SCOTT, and others, are dead; while ALLISON, MAULAY, BROUGHTON, and other survivors, are either past their vigor, or write less frequently for the periodical press. Even old BLACKWOOD is less spry than formerly, though still at the head of Magazine Literature.

GODEY'S, and PETERSON'S Ladies Books for December, are also at hand. Pretty, and we presume acceptable to the ladies. The illustrations are very good, and we suppose the Crochet work patterns—to say nothing of the Fashions—are all right; but we must confess our ignorance. If we had a lady Editor, we might turn these publications off to her. They are a touch above mere masculine criticism.

The Medical Examiner for November, has also been received. It is evidently a good work for the Medical Profession, and has the usual discussion upon "compound fractures," "materia medica," and "the mucous membrane," with other little delicate matters not necessary to mention.

New York, Nov. 17.—The steamer United States, from Aspinwall, arrived to-day with one hundred and twenty thousand dollars in specie.

The steamer City of London arrived to-day with one hundred thousand dollars in specie.

Advices by the Black Warrior state that Canedo was moving with an army of 20,000 men from point to point, and organizing for active service.

News of Gen. Pierce's election reached Havana on the 11th. November.

Concord, Nov. 18.—The Judges of the Supreme Court have decided that the Liquor Bill passed at the last session of the New Hampshire Legislature was unconstitutional.

The Vote of North Carolina.

The vote of Gen. Pierce, it will be seen, is 39,744, and that of Gen. Scott 39,058—majority for Pierce, 686. The vote is 12,675 less than that polled for Reid and Kerr in August; and about the same as that polled for Cass and Taylor in 1848. Pierce runs 544 votes behind Reid and Kerr, 3,935 behind Kerr. The Democratic loss on the August vote is 4,805, and the Democratic gain on the vote of 1848 is 9,238.

There were some 50 or 60 votes cast for Hale and Julian. At one precinct in Hyde the people voted direct for Pierce and King and Scott 3,935 behind Kerr. The Democratic loss on the August vote is 4,805, and the Democratic gain on the vote of 1848 is 9,238.

There were some 50 or 60 votes cast for Hale and Julian. At one precinct in Hyde the people voted direct for Pierce and King and Scott 3,935 behind Kerr. The Democratic loss on the August vote is 4,805, and the Democratic gain on the vote of 1848 is 9,238.

FORWARDED IS TO BE FORWARDED.—The Whig press says that Democratic divisions will soon ensue, and then they can rally and defeat us. But they reckon without their host. For, as the Baltimore Clipper says:

"We consider the Whig party, as such, dead and buried. It can never be successfully revived under its present title; and it would be folly to attempt its reorganization."

It goes on to state that political gamblers, corrupt leaders and ambitious demagogues have brought the party to this sad state, and adds:

"For the sake of the country, then, we hope that there will be no effort made to resuscitate the defunct Whig party. The people have decided in favor of their opponents—and in that decision, have given all the signals to abolitionists. The Whig party, as such, is dead, and it would be folly to attempt its reorganization."

THE PROCLAMATION OF THE EMPIRE.—The Paris letter writers are speculating on the time of the proclamation of the Empire, and the particular ceremonies with which the nation will be called on to bury their republican liberties. It seems to be settled in public opinion, that the great event will transpire in December, the 2d, 10th or 20th. The 2d is the anniversary of the battle of Austerlitz and of the President's coup d'etat, and it is thought will be the chosen day. It is a very close in respect to all his plans and purposes, keeping his own counsel perfectly until he is prepared to reveal himself.

The London papers see, in every new movement of Louis Napoleon, danger to the peace of Great Britain. A correspondent of the London Chronicle says that the result of the step which Louis has taken, will be, in the event of his death, or of any rival ambition in the bosom of the empire, and—endless confusion and bloodshed; and the writer adds: "If the declared policy and intentions of the Emperor, be as he professes, he will therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if not subdue her. Nothing, therefore, will there be the attempt to subvert the Republic, the question of the invasion of these islands is no longer a probability, but a necessity. He is no child, to be satisfied with the empty title of Emperor; and to carry out his plan of the empire, he must cripple England, if